My goals in my career with becoming a developer is to be a back-end developer. One of the ways in learning about tech is to see all sides of the spectrum so I began as a front-end developer to get a feel on how to build basic websites. I have done this through Educational bootcamps to jumpstart my career in the industry. I am currently looking for a internship to get my feet wet and revamp my career.

I show off my leadership qualities when working on projects in the Generation and Nucamp programs, offering to be the head leader. In my previous experience in hospitality I was always the captain of the servers group which means being the one when something goes wrong and having to be the one to close and assist the managers.
